Farm News

...er not to cut alfalfa ... the growing season is a ...estion among Appomat... farmers.

...Buck, county agent, says ... to the alfalfa re... the alfalfa is cut at ... the time of the average date ...st killing frost.

The decision as to whether to cut or not should be based on the present need for hay versus the future benefit of a high-yielding, stronger, and longer-lived stand. Permitting alfalfa to store food reserves in the fall is especially important when the alfalfa is to be left in the field for three years or more.

Cutting alfalfa later than three to four weeks before the average date of the first killing frost does not allow time for maximum food storage before growth is stopped by cold weather. Cutting at this time will result in weaker stands, reducing yields the following year, and less resistance to winter injury.

Since alfalfa will withstand a fairly severe frost, some growth will usually be made up to two weeks to a month after the average date of the first killing frost in the fall.

Grazing a part of the last growth after growth stops in the fall will not harm the alfalfa. It is best to let the dead alfalfa dry out slightly before grazing. And it is desirable to leave some growth as a mulch for protection of the crowns.

Meat Hog Certification Gains Wide Approval

Certification of meat hogs is gaining widespread approval among Virginia's purebred producers.

R. M. Godsey, swine specialist at VPI, says meat hog certification puts money in the hog farmer's pocket by stressing more pigs per sow, increased rates of gain and better carcass quality.

There are, Godsey says, three classes of certified meat hogs: a certified litter; a certified mating; and a certified sire. Each pig from a certified litter will have "CL" after the registration number. Pigs from a certified mating .. the repeat mating of a boar and sow that have produced a certified litter .. will have "CM" on the pedigree. A certified sire is a boar that has sired five certified litters from five different sows, not more than two of which are dam and daughter or full sisters. He will have "CMS" on his pedigree.

First step toward a certified litter is to nominate the litter for "production registry" with the national breed association. This should be done within three days after farrowing. Breed associations have official blanks. Information on other necessary procedure is available from county agents, or from Godsey, care of the VPI Animal Husbandry Department, Blacksburg.
